Most of us will not step out of our comfort zone unless staying where we are becomes too uncomfortable, frustrating, or painful. The discomfort we're experiencing can be physical; it can be emotional; it can be philosophical or existential. We want to hang onto our security blankets with one hand and reach out to Jesus with the other hand. The problem is that what we're hanging onto will prevent us from touching Jesus. We have to let go. Today's message is an invitation to let your desperation motivate to let go and find new life.

Questions for Reflection:

- Are there any "nails" in your life that are causing you pain but you are reluctant to deal with?
- What is holding you back from giving the issues you are struggling to deal with to Jesus.
- What is your next step in experiencing "new life" going to be?
