Many of the Ten Commandments deal with external actions. A person can be caught stealing. You can hear when a person bears false testimony. You can witness a murder. But, today we'll look at something that's harder to detect. The tenth commandment prohibits coveting. This command goes beyond the externals and right to the heart of the matter. The tenth commandment teaches us some important truths.

1. God cares about the thoughts and intentions of the heart
2. God places in us legitimate desires for good things
3. When it comes to our desires, motivation is vital
4. Contentment is the antidote to coveting
